

Our work on regularization

The Canadian Council for Refugees and its members have long been advocating to regularize people in Canada who have no status or precarious status. Our regularization campaign was created to amplify these voices, and to continue calling on the Canadian government to provide status for all now.

Many allies across the country are working on different approaches to demand status for all. Here's an overview of what we've been doing in the past year:

• What are our demands?

We call on the Canadian government to reform the immigration system to bring an end to our two-tiered society and to provide permanent status to all those living and working here, recognizing their dignity and rights as human beings.

• What work has the CCR done?

Produced a submission to the government calling for open & flexible pathways

Launched a campaign in August 2022 advocating for status for all

Called on advocates to send letters to Members of Parliament & Minister Fraser

• Why are we renewing our efforts?

The federal government is currently debating the topic and will soon announce its decision regarding regularization. We need to urgently call for #StatusForAll!

Last Fall, 104 CCR members and allies sent letters to their local Members of Parliament and to Minister Fraser. Help us get to 250 letters!

• What are some key campaign messages?

Without permanent status, people in Canada are denied basic rights, services, and support. We need #StatusForAll now!

People living in Canada with precarious or no status may experience forms of abuse. Government must provide status to all living and working here.

Canada must provide permanent status to all those living and working here, and recognize their dignity and rights as human beings. #StatusForAll
